UNDERSTANDING YOUR SELF-IMAGE | Module 1 Exercise

Self-image is not about arrogance or insecurity — it is about accuracy. The goal of this exercise is to get an honest, clear picture of how you currently see yourself, where that picture came from, and the one shift you will make this week to begin reshaping it.

Take your time. Be honest. No one else reads this.

PART 1 | How I See Myself Now

I am the kind of person who:

I am NOT the kind of person who:

People who know me well would describe me as:

I believe I am capable of:

I believe I am NOT capable of:

My greatest strength is:

My biggest limiting belief about myself is:

PART 2 | Where These Beliefs Came From

Our self-image is formed by repeated experiences, especially from authority figures in our early years. Understanding the source of a belief is the first step to evaluating whether it is still serving us.

A belief about myself I formed in childhood:

A belief that came from a failure or harsh criticism:

A belief that came from a significant success:

A belief someone important told me about myself (positive):

A belief someone important told me about myself (negative):

One belief I hold about myself that may not be objectively true:

Evidence that contradicts my most limiting belief:

PART 3 | My Ideal Self-Image

In 2 years, I want to see myself as:

The biggest gap between who I am now and who I want to be:

One person whose self-image I admire — and why:
